

Table of Contents

Introduction	9
Chapter 1. The Necessity and Challenge of Interreligiosity	13
Choice	13
New values	14
A world-centered religiosity	14
The question of belonging	17
A different mindset: com-passion with others	18
“Trans-difference”	19
The transcendent	20
Uniqueness, communication and “trans-difference”	21
Distinctiveness and covenantality	23
Inspiration from Buber and Levinas	25
The other in Levinas’s ethical metaphysics	26
Plural society, religion and redemption of the subject	33
Remedies	35
Interreligious theology	36
A theology in touch with reality	37
Conditions for dialogue	41
Chapter 2. Hassidic Ingredients for Interreligiosity	49
Everyone is called	50
Everyone has his own way	51
A united soul	53
Start with yourself	54
Not to be preoccupied with oneself	55
On the place where one stands	57
Chapter 3. Violence and Peace in Religions	59
The violent side of human existence	60
Violent desire	60
Violent jealousy	60
False religiosity	61
Peace as proximity	62
Pursuing peace as disciples of Aharon	62
Truth and peace	63
Erasing God’s name in the name of peace	64
Learned people and shalom	64

Ask for the peace of Jerusalem for the sake of the neighbor, for God's sake	65
The holiness of wholeness	65
Israeli-Palestinian conflict	68
Religious views on suffering	71
Mercy and its limits	77
God, a merciful Father and a righteous Judge	81
Chapter 4. Interreligious Teaching and Dialogue	85
Interreligious co-teaching	85
Hindu and Jewish perspectives on interreligious friendship	86
Jewish and Buddhist thoughts	91
Abraham and Ibrahim	97
Jewish and Alevite light	102
Buber and the Dalai Lama	104
Pascha and Pesach	108
Peace talks	112
Finkenwerder	113
Dr. Ramezani	115
Chapter 5. Interreligious Theology	119
John Hick	121
Dan Cohn-Sherbok	123
Michael S. Kogan	124
Theocentric Christians	125
Multiple religious belonging	128
Chapter 6. Between Christians and Jews	131
Openness in the Jewish tradition	131
Christian changes and Jewish responses	133
Nostra Aetate: a document of teshuva	133
Jewish influence on Nostra Aetate	135
Critical notes	137
Dabru emet	140
Jewish recognition of the legitimacy of Christianity	141
"Dabru emet" and religious Jews	141
Together towards the future	144
The American Jewish approach to Christianity and to Nostra Aetate	145
The inner-Jewish debate: Soloveitchik and Heschel	147
Judaism and Christianity: different and related	150
A psychological interpretation of Soloveitchik's standpoint	151
No religion is an island	152
An outstretched hand to Christians	153

Statement of orthodox rabbis on Christianity	154
Jews reaching out to Christians: the case of Rosenzweig	155
The rays or the eternal way	156
Buber and interreligious theology	164
The category of presence	164
The art of translating	166
Relation to Christianity	167
Differences and trans-difference	169
A link between Judaism and Christianity	170
The antithetic view in Two Types of Faith	171
Recent Jewish views on Jesus and Paul	179
New Perspective on Paul	182
Chapter 7. On the Urgency of Dialogical Hermeneutics	187
Text and context	191
The problem and the chance of religions	191
The power of midrash	193
Dialogical reading	193
Lessing and beyond	194
Constructive theology	194
Hospitality	195
Excessive love for the own makes us forget the other	196
Particularism and universalism	197
From text to context and from context to text	198
Religiosity as having the capacity to be ashamed	199
Philosophy and interreligious dialogue	200
What texts mean and what they could mean	201
Identity and meta-identity	202
A pioneer experiment of dialogical hermeneutics and the problem of naivety	202
The problem of assimilatory alienation of the text and the priority of reading the text in its natural context	204
Example	205
“Trans-difference”	207
Universal friendship	208
Holy texts and human rights: combining the secular and the sacred	209
Polemic and dialogical interpretations	210
Conclusion	223
Bibliography	231
Index of Subjects	243
Index of Names	246