

Contents

Introduction: The farm as a social arena	9
Liv Helga Dommasnes
Sheep, dog and man
Multi-species becomings leading to new ways of living in Early Bronze Age longhouses on Jæren, Norway	23
Kristin Armstrong Oma
Unlocking identities
Keys and locks from Iron Age farms in eastern Sweden	53
Emma Nordström
Understandings – burial practice, identity and social ties
The Horvnes Iron Age burials, a peephole into the farming society of Helgeland, North-Norway	77
Birgitta Berglund
Individual lifeworlds and social structured societies in Merovingian settlements from the Munich Gravel Plain	105
Doris Gutschmiedl-Schümann
One thousand years of tradition and change on two West-Norwegian farms AD 200–1200	127
Liv Helga Dommasnes and Alf Tore Hommedal
A shattered farm: Changes in making space from pagan to Christian Norway	171
Kristin Armstrong Oma
House, farmyard and landscape as social arena in a time of transition	191
Helge Sørheim
Between chiefdom and kingdom
A case study of the Iron Age farm Borg in Lofoten, Arctic Norway	219
Inger Storli
Constructing society in Viking Age Iceland: Rituals and power	245
Timothy Carlisle and Karen Milek

The social structures of High Medieval rural settlements An example from the Northern Rhineland, Germany	273
Timo Bremer
“Being a vicar at the end of the world” The priesthood at Alstahaug vicarage in North-Norway presents its identity through the household and daily life before AD 1750	297
Birgitta Berglund
Authors and editors	323