Contents

Abbreviations 9

Tables 11

Figures 13

Acknowledgements 15

Abstract 17

1. Introduction 19

2. Cognitive Linguistics in the context of language pedagogy and second language acquisition research 24
2.1 The Cognitive Linguistic framework: key tenets 24
2.2 Cognitive Linguistics in the classroom: explicit or implicit? 27
2.3 Dimensions of consciousness: noticing, attention and metalinguistic awareness 32
2.4 Explicit approaches and the interface debate 34
2.5 Learned attention and language transfer 38
2.6 Selection of input and the role of instruction 40
2.7 Metalinguistic awareness and conceptual motivation 42
2.8 Summary and implications for this research project 43

3. Phrasal verbs 44
3.1 A general definition of phrasal verbs 44
3.2 Distinguishing phrasal verbs from related constructions 46
3.3 Prepositions and particles 50
3.4 Classifying phrasal verbs using semantic criteria 53
3.5 The classification of phrasal verbs in teaching material and learner dictionaries 56
3.6 Summary and implications for this research project 59

4. Cognitive Linguistics as a resource for the pedagogy of phrasal verbs 60
4.1 The concept of embodied cognition 60
4.2 Rudzka-Ostyn's metaphor-based approach 64
4.3 Tyler and Evans' Principled Polysemy approach 70
4.4 Mahpeykar and Tyler's "interplay" approach 77
4.5 Summary and implications for this research project 83

5. Previous research on the teaching and learning of phrasal verbs 85
5.1 Research focusing on avoidance of phrasal verbs 85
5.2 Research focusing on the teaching of phrasal verbs inspired by Cognitive Linguistics 87
5.3 Summary and implications for this research project 91

6. Cognitive Linguistic teaching approaches and cognitive load 94
6.1 Why cognitive load is an issue 94
6.2 Theory and definitions of cognitive load 96
6.3 Cognitive load theory and instructed language learning 100
6.4 Measurement of cognitive load 101
6.5 Summary and implications for this research project 102

7. Exploratory studies 104
7.1 Research interest and procedure 104
7.2 Conclusions for the following studies 108

8. Pilot study 111
8.1 The sample 111
8.2 Research questions 113
8.3 Design and teaching methodology 113
8.4 The selected corpus of phrasal verbs 117
8.5 The intervention 119
8.6 Test instruments 124
8.7 Data analysis 135
8.8 Discussion and outlook 144

9. Main study 148
9.1 The sample 148
9.2 Research questions 157
9.3 Design of the study 158
9.4 The selected corpus of phrasal verbs 159
9.5 The intervention 160
9.6 Test instruments 161
9.7 Data analysis 168
9.8 Discussion and outlook 177

10. Concluding remarks and implications for future research 180
10.1 Summary of the empirical results and implications for the applicability of CL in the secondary school classroom 180
10.2 Shortcomings of the present study and outlook on future research 181

Appendix 185

References 291